An official of the Yugoslav Foreign Secretariat made a statement in support of the Korean declaration [the joint North-South declaration of July 4]. According to the information received from a deputy of the foreign secretary, the leaders of the Yugoslav Foreign Secretariat were not surprised by the North Korean step, because the Korean [side] had informed them during the recent talks of the [Yugoslav and North Korean] foreign ministers. At that time, they were of the opinion that the DPRK considered itself stronger than South Korea, both in a political and an economic sense, and this is why it took the initiative more easily. [...]

The Chinese ambassador of this place called the [aforesaid] step a manifestation of the “wisdom” of Kim Il Sung, because in essence it is aimed at achieving the withdrawal of American [troops] from South Korea.
